

Kennedy Discusses Cuban Incident In Conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy said Thursday he has asked the Defense Department "to make sure that action will be taken" against any foreign vessels or aircraft that act against U.S. vessels or aircraft in the Caribbean.

Kennedy had been asked at a news conference to elaborate on what the White House meant in saying that all necessary action would be taken to prevent another attack such as that by Cuba-based MIG planes on an American shrimp boat Wednesday.

At the time Kennedy issued that order, the White House confirmed in a statement that Russia has given assurances that several thousand of her estimated 17,000 troops in Cuba will be pulled out by mid-March.

Some of the troops to be withdrawn, the White House said, were guarding missiles and bombers the Soviets pulled out of Cuba after the United States challenged their presence as offensive last October.

Asked if the U.S. government holds the Cubans, rather than the Russians, accountable for the shrimp boat incident, Kennedy said yes, the planes flew under a Cuban flag and came from Cuba and therefore "we would hold the Cubans responsible."

To another question, Kennedy said "I don't think we know the full reasons behind the attack on this vessel."

He said it is not known whether it was a decision of the Cuban government or the pilots involved. The President said by making it very clear what the U.S. response would be to any future incidents, he thinks repetition of such an attack has been made unlikely.

Kennedy opened the news conference by referring to his message to Congress on Thursday on the needs of senior citizens. He said it is not enough for the nation to add to years of life, but that it must also enrich the life of its citizens in later years.

He said his most important recommendation was a revised hospital insurance program for senior citizens under Social Security. And, Kennedy said, he feels very deeply that the program should be enacted.

In another volunteered statement, Kennedy said the New York newspaper strike has long since passed the point of toleration. He said it is clear that the International Typographical Union and Bertram Powers, president of its N.Y. local, are attempting to impose a settlement that could shut down newspapers in New York.

"Collective bargaining has failed," he said, and added that this is bad for New York and its citizens. He said one solution would be to submit differences to an independent arbitrator. He said he could see no other solution to the strike.

Kennedy's wording apparently amounted to urging what has been called compulsory arbitration.

Questions On Cuba

The first question concerned Cuba, and it came up from time to time again. Among the President's statements on the subject:—He would prefer not to elaborate on exactly what the United States would do in the event of a future attack by Cuba on a U.S. plane or vessel. He said the details of what would be done "I think can wait on events."

—The question of how far a Cuban plane or ship might be pursued would be considered by the secretary of state and the secretary of defense.

—It is not clear whether Wednesday's incident set a pattern that will mean future attacks, or whether it was an isolated case which occurred because of decisions by the pilots.

—He already has made very clear the distinction the administration makes between offensive and defensive weapons in Cuba.

"A MIG with its rather limited range is not regarded ordinarily as an offensive weapon," Kennedy said.

—The attack on the shrimp boat does not change the administration view of what is offensive and what is defensive.

U. S. Prestige

Other matters coming up:—PRESTIGE—The U.S. Information Agency is keeping secret the results of a poll on U.S. prestige abroad, Kennedy was told. Did he agree with this?

The President said that at "periodic intervals" this nation would be able to release the results of nearly all polls. He said that USIA officials will meet with members of the House Committee on Information and disclose the contents of the polls. Those that cannot be released, the President said, did not deal with this nation's prestige, but with other matters.

DISARMAMENT—Kennedy was asked if he thought disarmament should show some progress by April. He said he didn't like to see anything like an ultimatum set as a date, but that he hopes some progress can be made by then.

"We're going to keep at it," the President said of attempts to make some progress on nuclear bans.

MANAGED NEWS—Asked to define "Managed news," the President said, "You are charging us with something and you're asking me to define what you're charging us with." He said "we've had very little success" in managing the news "if that's what we're trying to do."

ADAM CLAYTON POWELL—The President was asked to comment on the controversy between Sen. John S. Williams, R-Del., and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y.

POWELL SPEAKS—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) is shown in Washington as he talks informally to newsmen in his office. He said he prepared a documented answer to Sen. John J. Williams' Senate speech in which the Delaware Republican termed a $250,000 federal grant to combat juvenile delinquency in Powell's home district an example of how the administration is "shoveling" money to Powell.

Georgian Gets Life In Slaying Of Bangor Youth

BAXLEY, Ga. (AP) — A truck driver, the father of five, received a life prison sentence Thursday for what a Georgia prosecutor called the brutal, senseless knife slaying of a Pennsylvania youth.

After five hours of deliberation, a Superior Court jury convicted William Edwards, 39, of murder for the Dec. 29 killing of Nicholas Matthew Casario, 19, of Bangor, Pa., in a car bumping incident on U.S. 1.

The jury recommended mercy, making it a formality under state law for Judge W. Dan Flexer to pronounce the life sentence. There was no immediate announcement of plans for an appeal.

Edwards received the verdict quietly but members of his family wept. His wife, children and other relatives had occupied front row seats throughout the trial that began Monday.

The fatal stabbing occurred at night as Casario and a companion, Don Fiorot, 22, also of Bangor, both Penn State students, returned from a Florida holiday. Fiorot testified that their car was bumped off the highway and Casario was stabbed and left dying by the roadside when he got out to protest.

The prosecutor, Solicitor General Jack W. Ballenger, said the young Pennsylvanian was "brutally, literally butchered" without any reason. He also charged Edwards with hypocrisy in joining the early search for the slayer and pretending to be indignant that a stranger in the county would be so brutally slain.

Claimed Self-Defense

In jail after his arrest and at his trial Edwards claimed self-defense. He testified that the Pennsylvanians bumped him. He said he had no recollection of stabbing Casario.

His nephew, Robert Edwards, 19, corroborated his testimony. The youth also was indicted on a murder charge for the slaying and awaits trial at a future court term.

Changes of an attempt at pre-judgment marked argument to the jury. They were made by prosecutor Ballenger after defense attorney Malone Sharpe argued that Casario and Fiorot, of Italian descent, were "hot blooded" and prone to quick-tempered action.

They considered Georgians, Sharpe said, "nothing more than a bunch of barefoot boys who eat turnip greens and growl and talk about the colored folk."

Ballenger branded Sharpe's statement an attempt to prejudice the jury.

Governor On Air Tour Of Strip Mining Region

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gov. Scranton viewed Central and Western Pennsylvania strip mines from the air and on foot Thursday. He concluded that mining problems vary from one section to another, making it hard to draw up strip mine laws to apply everywhere.

During a flight from Butler to Pittsburgh on the final leg of his tour, the governor told newsmen: "It is clearer than ever to me that law enforcement is even more important than the law itself. The variation in conditions between the central sections of the western counties is greater than I realized, which makes it more difficult to establish legislation that is applicable to every area, especially as to details. I'm still convinced there is need for stricter regulations."

Later, during a news conference at Greater Pittsburgh Airport, the governor said "I've seen a great many areas today where lack of enforcement has created many of our problems."

Scranton, running late all day, began the trip this morning with a flight from Harrisburg to Philadelphia after a 35-minute delay due to mechanical trouble with his private plane.

He took a look at Clearfield County strip mines from a helicopter, spent 30 minutes on the ground at a strip mine project, and spoke to a group at a meeting.

Later, he spoke to a group near Butler and went up in a helicopter again for an aerial view of Butler and Mercer county strip mines, covered by a three to five-inch mantle of snow.

Peering from a helicopter window, he remarked that "backfilling isn't as much a problem here as it is in Clearfield County."

This was a reference to the fact that coal lies deeper in Clearfield County than in the more western counties.

Because he was late, the governor cancelled plans to view strip mines in Allegheny and Washington counties.

Accompanying Scranton on the tour was H. Beecher Chambers, state secretary of mines.

During the flight over Butler and Mercer counties, he took along William Harger, a member of the board of the Independent Mineral Producers Association; and William Guckert, representing the Western Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs.

Sportsman Upset

Guckert was upset because this particular phase of the tour was mapped out by Harger.

"Don't worry," the governor told Guckert. "I've seen lots of strip mining."

At the meeting in the Horn of Plenty restaurant south of Butler, Scranton said:

"I didn't come to talk, but to listen."

Addressing a group near Clearfield, Scranton said:

"Let me say to you bluntly that I am absolutely positive that no matter what comes out, a number of you will be greatly disappointed."

The governor listened attentively as conservationists, sportsmen and coal strippers aired their respective views.

Runaways Nabbed By S-burg Police

STROUDSBURG police last night apprehended three 14-year-old boy runaways and held them in the borough lockup pending the arrival of their parents.

Police said two were from Upper Darby and the other from Darby, all near Philadelphia. Their parents were scheduled to pick them up during the night.

Police said the three came to the area looking for jobs and said they left because of poor marks in school. One youngster said he had been averaging marks about 80, but said he considered that poor for him.

President Outlines His Plans For The Elderly

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy Thursday spelled out 36 ways to help America's senior citizens. Tops on the list was his much-debated, politically-hot plan to provide hospital insurance through Social Security.

His broad message to Congress called for a five-year, $10 billion program touching on housing, health, income, jobs and even recreation for the elderly.

Major items had a familiar ring. The health proposals were stymied by Congress last year. The tax benefits were part of the President's broad tax recommendations earlier this year.

The President—first U.S. chief executive to offer a message on the problems of the aging—called for:

Specific Points

An expansion of Social Security to cover hospital and nursing home costs for those 65 and older—at an initial four-year price of $5,605,000,000.

Tax credits to improve the incomes of the elderly—especially those in low and middle income brackets.

More funds for low interest home loans—and a new emphasis on group residences where the elderly can get housekeeping assistance, central food service and some nursing care, but still maintain privacy.

New moves to spur job opportunities for those over 65 who still want to work.

The controversial Social Security-paid hospital insurance was introduced concurrently with the changes over the stymied 1962 version, but was basically the same.

Hospital Care

Like the earlier version, the new bill would provide up to 90 days of paid hospital care after the patient had satisfied the first $20 to $30 of the costs.

But the new proposal offers two options. The insured elderly person can get 180 days of paid care after paying the first 2½ days himself. Or he may elect to get 45 days of paid care without paying for any portion of it.

However he must make his choice in writing before his 65th birthday, and that choice is irrevocable. If no choice is made, then the insured person can only get the basic 90-day benefits of the bill.

But the new proposal does not erase objections of the American Medical Association to any plan which would be financed by Social Security. Nor does it give private or voluntary health insurance plans a chance to get a foot in the door, as does the bill introduced Tuesday by liberal Republicans.

Would Increase Taxes

The President's insurance plan would mean a boost in Social Security taxes—up ¼ of one percent for the first $5,200 of income for both employer and employee. That's a maximum of $13 a year for each.

Last year's bill which Kennedy promoted never got out of the House Ways and Means Committee. An attempt to get it through the Senate as an amendment to another bill was defeated 52-48.

LEGISLATOR INDICTED—A. Gordon Boone of Baltimore County, center, who is Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, walks toward the House chamber to preside over the afternoon session shortly after learning of his indictment by Justice Department on mail fraud charges involving savings and loan association activities. He was indicted with five others.

Landslides Hit Italian Villages

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Rain drummed dully Thursday on a semicircle of tragedy around Naples where half a dozen villages were partly wrecked by mudslides. Others were menaced, roads were blocked, and power lines cut.

Firemen and police used ambulances and trucks to carry the last 100 grieving residents to safety from doomed Nersino, a village of 686 population at the tip of the Sorrento peninsula. A huge mudslide down a steep mountain slope was pouring over outlying homes of the village and advancing at five to 15 yards an hour.

Police also ordered precautionary evacuation of the 167 residents of nearby Marina di Canion, which also would be isolated if the mud overflowed the narrow highway.

Termini, a third village at the tip of the peninsula which juts out toward the Isle of Capri, appeared spared as landslides halted despite daylong rain. But many of the villagers already had fled. The tiny road linked to the rest of the peninsula was cut.

Almost unceasing rainfall since Sunday had added 11 new deaths, to bring the toll of Italy's worst winter of the century to 167.

In the hills inland from Naples a 300-yard wide mudslide that had poured into Caposele slowed, and authorities began to hope that most of the town of 4,000 population might be saved. So far 24 homes had been swallowed up by the mud, 50 others were damaged and 50 to 100 other homes abandoned.

Italy's Alpine north and palm-fringed south also were hit by the backlash of the disastrous winter. In the high valleys of the Alto Adige—Italian South Tyrol—heavy new snowfall collapsed the roofs of five homes. The residents fled before the cave-in and were unhurt.

Mudslides and floods cut roads in Calabria in the toe of the Italian Boot. There was snowfall in Sicily.

Floods added to the tragedy in many parts of Appennine central Italy. Thousands of acres of armland were under water and crops were washed out.

In the north of Europe, the bitterly cold weather of the past three months continued.

In Bulgaria Flareup: More African Students Refuse To Attend Classes

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Angered by racial discrimination and unable to leave, 300 African students in Communist Bulgaria are refusing to attend classes, an African diplomat there said Thursday.

This latest student flareup behind the Iron Curtain was related by Ambassador J. L. Appah Samong of Ghana, who led 26 Ghanaian students out of Bulgaria last week. They were the first of about 100 Africans to leave.

The immediate cause of the student strike at Sofia State University is the Bulgarian government's refusal to pay their transportation to other countries, Appah Samong said in a telephone interview from Sofia, the Bulgarian capital.

Embarrassing To Reds

The African student unrest, marked by a student-militia clash last week, has proved embarrassing to Communist attempts to spread influence through Africa.

A Bulgarian statement last week said most students wanted to remain and charged the Ghanaians were trying to stir up trouble.

The students form a majority of the 350 or more Africans still in Bulgaria under scholarships and educational aid programs. Their studies and accommodations had been financed by the Bulgarian government and they received monthly allowances of about $80.

Following last week's clash triggered by the arrest and expulsion of seven leaders of the banned All-African Students Union, most of the Africans decided to leave Bulgaria and go to Western countries, the envoy said.

No Representation

Remaining students have no diplomatic representation in Sofia and are reported having difficulties in contacting their missions in other East bloc countries.

Three Nigerian students who managed to get out of Bulgaria on their own told a news conference in Vienna that Communist authorities were apparently trying to stop the outflow of Africans. The Nigerians said most of the Africans are trying to raise funds by selling their belongings.

A surface fleet could be manned on a more fully multinational basis, he said.

Kennedy said Congress should approve any arrangement as important as this one, whether it be for use of submarines or surface ships, and his administration plans to submit the matter for congressional approval.

NUCLEAR—On a test ban treaty, he said, the major argument for it is to eliminate proliferation of weapons. Either side would have a right to abrogate the treaty "if proliferation resulted," he said. As to France, he said it has been recognized as a nuclear power by the Soviet Union and this is a matter that would have to be discussed. In addition, there is the question of other countries that might become involved.

He said a test ban is not a guarantee of ending proliferation. But he said the Russians were not likely to accept a ban unless they thought proliferation was undesirable and that this would help.

He commented in conclusion that the two sides still are far apart on the details of a test ban treaty.

To a question about his comments on the New York newspaper strike, the President said, "A third party might be able to suggest a bridging role." But he said he doesn't think compulsory arbitration should be considered now.

Police Quell Refugee Cubans In Florida Riot

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Charging through a hail of bottles and rocks, police squads put down a Cuban refugee riot that erupted Thursday in the face of picketing by a peace group.

Thirteen Cubans were arrested in the crowd of 350 which drew some 100 policemen and three fire units to the scene in front of the Cuban Revolutionary Council headquarters.

The four pickets, reportedly members of the Committee for Nonviolent Action, were taken to the police station for interrogation but were not booked.

The midmorning fight lasted about 30 minutes and was by large crowds behind rope barriers. The pickets announced earlier they would appear at the headquarters.

Police were prepared, Spanish-speaking police agents circulated through the crowd before the fighting broke out but their presence obviously infuriated the refugees.

The pickets, three boys and a woman, were not identified. Police intelligence officers said the woman pacifist told them she had come here from New York to lead the demonstration.

They wore signs readings, "We Oppose Military Action," "Thou Shalt Not Kill," and "Peace Corps, Not Marine Corps, in Latin America."

Reports circulated that the crowd planned to march on the police station. Immediately 20 patrol cruisers and 25 helmeted officers, many with police dogs, blocked entrances to the station. The mob did not appear.

A fire hose was connected to a hydrant in the downtown riot area but was not turned on. The arrested Cubans were charged with disorderly conduct and breach of the peace and were ordered to appear in Municipal Court on Feb. 27.

Unions Seek More Federal Employees

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The AFL-CIO reported Thursday its drive to recruit at least a million more federal employees as union members is picking up steam.

The federation's Executive Council said President Kennedy's second order extending formal government recognition to federal employes unions has already "stimulated a healthy growth of membership."

The council threw its support behind proposals of the government unions for a 35-hour work week, pension and insurance improvement, voluntary withholding of union dues from federal worker pay checks, and "elimination of speedup practices now in effect."

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, conceded that labor proposals for legislation to reduce the present 40-hour work week for both federal and private workers have made little progress in Congress.

"If the economy goes the way I am afraid it will go the next few months I think many people will take a more serious view toward the remedy we have proposed," he added.

Meany said he has no over-all data on federal worker union membership growth since the Kennedy order. He said the gain was substantial both among the government's one million white-collar employes and the 1½ million blue-collar workmen, especially in shipyards.

Of the total 2.5 million federal employes, some 800,000 presently belong to AFL-CIO unions.

B'nai B'rith Pays Tribute To Students

THE STROUDSBURG Lodge of B'nai B'rith heard the winning essays in its annual brotherhood awards contest read at a meeting Wednesday in the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

The winners were Miss Judy Foulkes, Stroud Union High School, and Miss Jo Ann Motts, East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School.

Miss Foulkes' essay was titled "The Magic Recipe." She said that for the recipe of good brotherhood, one of the basic ingredients is consideration of mankind.

Miss Motts chose as her theme, "The United States—The Melting Pot of the World" and emphasized that brotherhood in this world of confusion is the richest and rarest giving of life. No man can survive alone—he must depend on other people for a good many of his wants and desires.

Started in 1953

The Stroudsburg lodge originated its brotherhood essay contest in 1953. It is limited to seniors of the two local schools and is under the supervision of the school English departments.

Each winner received a $25 savings bond. Coordinators were Dr. Seymour Pollan and Atty. Edwin Krawitz.

Rare Operation Pair 'Good'

BOSTON (AP)—A woman donor and the ailing Wisconsin man who received her kidney in a rare transplant operation Monday both were reported in good condition Thursday at Boston's Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Doctors say that, so far as known, there exist only a few cases of successful kidney transplants involving unrelated persons.

In the case of George Brost, 39, of Wauwatosa, Wis., who received a healthy kidney from Nancy Luedicke, 29, of Milwaukee on Monday, doctors have cautioned that "a year must pass before the procedure can be termed successful."

Mrs. Luedicke, who lives in a Milwaukee suburb and works in the city, had never met the ailing Brost, father of nine, before she became one of 50 volunteers to give a kidney to save his life.

Interest Lags In Local Science Fair

INTEREST in the Monroe County Science Fair seems to be waning. Ned Frick, president, reported at a meeting of the committee for the fair last night at East Stroudsburg State College.

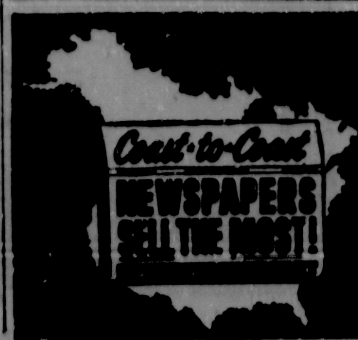

Frick told the group the interest in science that was touched off by Russia's launching of its first Sputnik appears to be decreasing.

He said reports from teachers in various high schools and lack of participation in area science fairs contribute to his opinion.

Physical arrangements for the fair, to be held in the National Guard Armory at East Stroudsburg March 21 and 22, were discussed. Dr. Grady Moore of the ESSC faculty reported he is recruiting judges for the various categories.

The group was notified by State Sen. William Z. Scott of Lansford that he will make a senatorial scholarship available to the top winner in the local fair.

Tobyhanna Army Depot will again present a plaque to the student entering the best electronics exhibit.

Relocation Of Displaced Discussed

A discussion on problems of relocating persons displaced by the Lincoln Ave. urban renewal project in East Stroudsburg highlighted yesterday's meeting of the Monroe County Redevelopment Authority.

King Beers, executive director, reported that approximately 16 families are eligible for public housing.

He said he has discussed the situation with East Stroudsburg Borough Council and School Board and the Monroe County Master Builders Assn.

He indicated if no other housing can be found for these families, it may be necessary to provide additional public housing.

3rd Vehicle Rams Shop At Mt. Pocono

MT. POCONO — For the third time in two years, a runaway vehicle caused extensive damage to the Vincent April Photo Center at 5:30 a.m. yesterday.

A tractor-trailer carrying 19 tons of coal and operated by Albert Manini, Exeter, jackknifed on icy Route 611 as the driver applied his brakes to avoid striking another tractor-trailer in front of him.

Mounted Curb

The rig mounted the curb and struck a corner of the building. April, owner and operator of the business, said the impact disturbed the foundation and caused cracks in walls and ceilings inside the store. He estimated the damage at several thousand dollars.

Manini was thrown from the rig, but escaped serious injury. Damage to the tractor was estimated at $10,000. Coal was spread over the area.

THE CURRENT REAL ESTATE assessed valuation in Monroe County is $69,682,575, according to figures released yesterday by George Brands, chief county assessor. These figures compare with $68,040,860 for the assessed value for the county in 1962.

In addition to the 1963 figure there is $61,638,655 in tax exempt real estate in the county. This figure compares with $56,323,287 for last year.

Exemptions include such properties as churches, schools, college, YMCA buildings, county owned property and public utilities.

County-Owned

The appraised value of county owned property is $452,000.

This year's assessed value is $1,641,715 higher than that of last year.

Last year the county commissioners used $68,000,000 figures for budget purposes. What the amount will be this year is unknown at present.

Board Rules Out Nickname Use On Official Ballot

MONROE County Commissioner John Lesoine yesterday brought to the attention of the Election Board a request to have a candidate use a nickname on the official ballot.

After referring to Johnson's Election Guide, the board ruled that no candidate can use a nickname on the ballot.

The guide cited, under the provisions of section 1002, "only the name of the candidate for office may appear on the ballot . . . a nickname may not be included."

Lesoine also called to the attention of the board that he has heard that some voters in the county are residing in one voting district and voting in a district of prior residence.

The board reminded persons in this category that they can be charged with "a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not exceeding $1,000 or to undergo an imprisonment of not less than three months nor more than five years or both in the discretion of the court," as stated in P.L. 1333 as reenacted.

Urged to Appear

The commissioners urged persons in this group to come to the Monroe County Courthouse, Commissioners Office, and change their address now that voter registration is open.

Voter registration opened in December and will close April 1. To date there have been 67 voters registered. This breaks down to 25 Democrats, 40 Republicans, and 2 Independents.

In other business the commissioners approved a resolution setting the week of March 1 through 7 as National Weights and Measures Week.

The commissioners also announced that the courthouse will be closed today in observance of Washington's Birthday.

World Prayer At Tannersville

MRS. H. G. BAKER will be the guest speaker Friday, March 1, 7:30 p.m. at the annual observance of the World Day of Prayer in the Tannersville Methodist Church.

Guest soloists for the program will be Mrs. Charles Snyder.

Should there be inclement weather the program will be held March 8.

Walks 25 Miles To Work

A TOBYHANNA Army Depot employee walked to work from his home in Scranton yesterday. To cover the 25-mile distance, Dominick Sillitti of 1302 Mulberry St., arose about 3 a.m., breakfasted on toast and coffee, and armed with some candy bars, a box of raisins and two hand-aid, began his walk at 3:45 a.m.

At 8:55 a.m., he arrived at the first guard outpost at the depot.

His five hours and 10-minute walk was interrupted three times, twice by short coffee breaks in diners along the way, and once by a curious State trooper. After explaining that he was taking part in the President's Physical Fitness Program, the trooper waved him on with a smile.

While walking, several cars bearing depot stickers slowed down but Sillitti gave no sign that he wanted a lift.

At the end of his walk, he had to be treated for sore feet in the depot dispensary, but showed no other signs of wear.

"I guess some people would think I'm nuts for doing this," he said. "But this isn't the longest hike I've taken. About six years ago I walked from Old Forge to Harveys Lake, and that's about 27 miles."

Ex-Infantryman

An ex-infantryman, Sillitti served in Africa, Sicily and Italy during World War II.

His favorite outdoor sport is not hiking, but golf. He shoots in the 70's and last summer was part of a two-man team that captured the depot's golf championship.

Sillitti is married to the former Mary McDonald of Scranton and they have two children.

Hesse Man Who Knows His Dates

GEORGE Hesse, assistant post engineer at the Tobyhanna Army Depot, is a man with a memory for important dates. Now a patient at the Monroe County General Hospital, Hesse recalled that nine years ago, on Feb. 22, 1954, a key event took place in his depot activity.

That was the day the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company completed a permanent electric hookup at the 1,418-acre Federal site. Up until then, temporary lines were supplying power to the installation.

The 66,000-volt transmission line has carried a lot of electricity up the Mountain since that Washington's Birthday of 1954. Last fiscal year, the depot's power bill was $167,273.

That Uncuttable Budget

Washington was treated the other day to the unusual sight of a Congressman protesting Federal spending in his state. Rep. John W. Byrnes (R., Wis.), opposed plans of the Area Redevelopment Agency to build a $418,000 paper mill in Wisconsin. It would produce paper products just like other mills in the state turn out, and the existing mills are running far under capacity. Transferring orders from old mills to the new ones will transfer jobs as well, and no new jobs will be created.

This is a small matter in the $99 billion the Administration proposes to spend in 1964. But it's one of many unwise, unnecessary and foolish programs that go to make it an all-time record budget.

The budget adds new programs to the old ones, and increases spending in nearly every category. The "savings" of which the politicians speak do not represent any slow-down of spending, but turn out to be sales of Government property in some cases, and transferring lending functions to private hands in others. The budgets for payroll, overhead and programs rise.

The Government Economy Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers has suggested savings of $2.8 billion in fiscal '64 spending in a preliminary study of the budget requests, and promises to hunt more fat as time goes on. The NAM objects to $250 million in new military housing, for example, on the grounds that the housing shortage which led to the program in the first place is long over. It questions $768 million of foreign economic aid to nations which have shown little capacity to use it, and little allegiance to free world purposes.

Budget Director Kermit Gordon defended the budget by citing the rise in population, but he's new in the job and may not have heard that Federal expense has been outrunning population growth for years now.

Democrats and Republicans in Congress alike are alarmed at the size of the budget, and the $11 billion deficit forecast — particularly as last year's forecast of a half billion surplus became a realized $8 billion deficit.

The budget can be, should be and must be cut.

Recognizing Gifted Teachers

The recommendation by Dr. James B. Conant at the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators in Atlantic City that a system of merit pay increases for teachers be adopted in U. S. schools seems a good one to The Inquirer.

The same goes for his suggestion that controversial school issues be given a full public hearing. In two recent cases we believe a fuller public understanding would have brought needed reforms sooner.

We refer to the battle between the teaching reading and those of the whole word and phrase system, as one instance, and the conflict between the advocates of "progressive" emphasis on the humanities and social science and those who believe in the value of the physical sciences, mathematics and foreign languages, as a second.

As a matter of fact, the question of merit raises for teachers is itself an example of an issue that has been suppressed to an unwholesome extent. We believe that both teachers and pupils, and U. S. schools as a whole would be better off, if gifted teachers received special recognition. Dr. Conant advises two classifications, "junior" and "senior" staff members, and a probationary period of possibly four years after which "junior" teachers would rate merit raises and job tenure.

We are not certain that this is the way to do it. Dr. Conant is vague as to how gifted teachers are to be identified. The Inquirer has suggested that youngsters be required to pass tests in basic skills administered by outside testers, which would indicate, it seems to us, how successful teachers were in getting their subject across as well as whether pupils needed remedial training in specific areas. In any event, however, teachers should receive recognition for special merit.

Dr. Conant serves a good cause in bringing this issue before the Atlantic City convention.

John Chamberlain

Washington, The Businessman

February is the month in which we praise famous men. The assumption is that we need heroes to lift the masses out of themselves and to raise standards to which the wise and the honest may aspire.

I do not for a moment doubt the need for heroes. Nevertheless, there is a disconcerting bit of truth encapsulated in that old Chinese saying, "A great man is a public calamity."

Many of our modern crop of great men have indeed been public calamities. Hitler, Mussolini, Lenin, Stalin, Castro, Mao Tse-tung — the list of great men who have used their talents in murderous ways is too long to be overeluded. Better if such "heroes" had never been born.

To be something more than a public calamity, the great man must respect the human personality as an end, not as a means. Americans rightly revere Abraham Lincoln and George Washington because their greatness was not tinged with megalomania.

Greatness was something they shouldered, not because they wanted to be great, but because they had jobs to do. They respected the individual, even the individual in dissent. They did not stoop to use people as means if such use was likely to tend in any way to degrade them as human beings.

The really distinguishing thing about Washington, in particular, is that, like Winston Churchill, he was always willing to go out of office. His acres at Mt. Vernon, with its broad view of the Potomac River, was his abiding passion, and he always longed to get back to them.

The truth is that he regarded business — the private enterprise — as actually far more interesting than politics or the military life.

In Washington's philosophy, soldiering was something to be pursued under the whip of necessity; one took up one's sword under duress, to help preserve or restore a situation in which one could go back to private life on unblemished terms.

What tends to get lost out of our standard history books is the fact that Washington was perhaps the greatest business man of his day. He had the instincts of a land developer and a modern commercial farmer, and he was also the most prominent flour miller of his time.

The day after he had resigned as Commander-in-Chief of the successful American Army in 1783 Washington was back in Mt. Vernon, actively picking up the reins of practical business affairs that he had dropped some seven years before.

The minute he had his farm in order he was up and off on tour of the upper Potomac River and across the Alleghenies to the Monongahela.

He had invested ten thousand dollars in stock of the Potomac Company, which proposed to connect the seaboard and the western rivers by a system of locks and canals.

He owned title to lands in Pennsylvania, western New York, Kentucky and Ohio as well as in Virginia, and in his will, a remarkable document, he recommended that his "executors not . . . be precipitate in disposing of the landed property

. . . experience having fully evinced that the price of land (especially above the Falls of the Rivers & on the Western Waters) have been progressively rising, and cannot be long checked in its increasing value. . . ."

As an engineer-business man before the Revolution, Washington had organized a company to drain the Great Dismal Swamp in back of Norfolk, Va., and for five years of his life he spent most of his energies as active manager of the enterprise. The business was a most profitable one.

After his death his executors collected some $18,000 in dividends on it in the years between 1810 and 1825, and they finally sold Washington's share in the company to Bushrod Washington, a nephew, for $12,100.

While he was busy with his engineering and land development projects Washington was also performing all sorts of experiments in scientific agriculture and in the milling of superfine flour.

He was one of the first farmers in America to grow alfalfa to be plowed under as a "green manure"; he quit tobacco farming in disgust, because it was impoverishing his soil; he established three flour mills, selling the product throughout the colonies and in the West Indies; and he held a share in the Principio Iron Works.

Bernard Knollenberg, the lawyer who is spending a most happy retirement writing books on Washington, put me on to the substance of Washington's last will and testament, an eloquent document that shows where the Father of Our Country had really put his heart.

He did his duty as soldier and politician — but his career as farmer and business man was his great private pleasure.

The Pennsylvania Story

Hiking Hits A Cold Spot

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

Hill To The Hikers: — The hiking craze that has swept the nation's capital in Washington and sent some government officials, secretaries (and a few stray pooches) on the trot hasn't even batted a blaster among counterparts here on Pennsylvania's Capitol Hill.

The simple fact is that there have been no such yeoman outbursts of physical prowess locally (other than the spurring trot of a few downtown "civilians" over the past week end) — a circumstance generally attributable to two factors insofar as the Keystone State's Capitol Hill is concerned.

In the first place, the fact that the physical fitness and hiking idea has been advocated by Democratic President Kennedy apparently has something to do with it. . . . Democratic job holders here seemingly feel little compunction to wear out a pair of shoes for the Great White Chief when they're about to lose their jobs under the new Republican Scranton Administration.

Secondly, those few Republicans who have managed to filter up the ramps of Capitol Hill so far in this new administration, seemingly take a dim view of striding in the wilds at the behest of a Democrat! As for the brethren in the legislative branch, they too seem little inclined to break out their alpine sticks, one portly lawmaker puffing as he coaxed out of his car in the rear of the Main Capitol Building: "Oo! Hike fifty miles indeed. It's bad enough hiking to that elevator! . . . The elevator in question: 200 feet distant and on the same level — no steps — which would whisk him to the same floor level as his legislative chamber. . . . Task!

Austerity Program Personalized — When the Scranton Administration embarked upon its "austerity program" (it's quite the thing to do these days — remember Governor Leader's and then Governor Lawrence's austerity programs?) the State Department of Health apparently got carried away with the idea.

A Scranton executive memo to all department heads calling for stringent economy in expenditures and requesting department and bureau heads to scrutinize personnel rosters with the idea of reducing personnel by 20 per cent was reproduced by the department and redistributed to "all hands for notation and action."

The reproduced memo however filled one side of the page — and in an obvious austere move — the message was continued on the back side, rather than on a second sheet of paper. . . . Most unusual, most unusual, these days on bureaucratic Capitol Hill!

"Shucks, He Won't See Us" — That was the comment heard one day this week when a member of a delegation from Luzerne County, in Harrisburg for a chat-chat with House Mines Committee Chairman William C. Buchanan on an anthracite strip mine backfilling legislation, suggested trying to see Governor Scranton. . . . "He's too busy — you've got to have an advance appointment."

Luzerne County Representatives Frank P. Crossin, Kingston, and Fred J. Shupnik, Luzerne, hosting the group down here, took another view of the thing. . . . They checked with the Governor's Office: Could the Governor see the group? . . . "Bring 'em up," was the word passed back. . . . The somewhat flabbergasted group popped into the Governor's outer reception room and shortly Mr. Scranton, coat over arm, walked out to see the group and chat unburdened with members of the delegation. (Incidentally, both Crossin and Shupnik are Democrats. The Governor of course is a Republican.)

Stroudsburg Cagers took another one on the nose when Northampton handed them a 70-56 defeat on the local court.

Off The Record

By BOB CLARK

We doubt anyone is raving these days about not having enough snow this Winter. With the 34th snowfall clobbering the Poconos those who really love the white stuff must wonder if it is ever going to come to a halt. The Kennedy Administration may be going for the 50-mile hike these days. But let veteran Pocono Mountains observers tell you they've used more muscles shoveling this winter than the entire Clan in Washington, D.C., the past two years.

That's quite a boast too. When you consider the population in the Poconos is around 70,000 (that includes Monroe, and parts of Pike, Wayne, Lackawanna) while the Nation's Capital runs over the 600,000 mark.

We met a man yesterday who was bent over his shovel for the 34th time this season. "Sorry," he said, "but I can't straighten up. This digging-out business is just too much for me." Another East Stroudsburg veteran of sidewalk cleaning claims, "My hands and fingers haven't been the same since last Fall. They are deformed to fit the grip of a shovel automatically."

The folks in the mountains don't know what it is to dig themselves out of a heavy snowfall. One exclaimed, "We get four to six inches more in the mountains and the wind blows it around twice as much. It's a ways seems to me like a full day's work to get paths and roadways cleared to the highways."

"Anyway it brings out the best in men." One thing is sure. It is a costly venture for the state, townships and boroughs. No one can foresee the exact financial burden expected for snow removal.

As such, provisions in the budget cannot be made to the exact penny. But you can bet your last dollar that it will be a pretty big Lincoln when all the figures are added up.

So you have beauty and the beast. Beauty is ailing its white background around the Poconos and the beastly cost of clearing it away is adding parking areas.

What? No. 35 is on its way!!!

Try and Stop Me

At a country auction, Mrs. Peggy Weidman won a rare old hand-blown whiskey bottle with a bid of twenty-two dollars. An old farmer had watched her bidding with mounting disbelief. Now, as her bottle was delivered to her, he leaned over to take a closer look at it. "Gosh 'a'mighty," he gasped to his wife. "It's EMPTY!"

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington—Fidel Castro is brazenly using the prisoner-ransom money he obtained from the U.S. to finance Communist subversion in Latin America.

Ecuadorian students grumbled on returning from Cuba revealed that their Communist leaders received $30,000 of the ransom money to conduct anti-government operations.

The students reported that Castro, in turning over the money, boasted that all of the $2.5 million ransom payment he got for the Bay of Pigs prisoners would be used for "revolutionary activities throughout the hemisphere."

In addition to this $50,000, Castro told the Ecuadorian students another $50,000 will be sent to their country in April to finance the transportation to Cuba of several hundred more hand-picked students for training in guerrilla warfare.

Shipment of machine guns, pistols, rifles, ammunition, and dynamite were promised by Castro after the next batch of students finish six months of intensive instruction in the use of these weapons.

This information from the Ecuadorian students has been confirmed by U.S. Intelligence that is closely watching what Castro is doing with the large ransom shipments of food and medicine to Cuba. The full ransom payment is $33 million, of which about $25 million in supplies has been delivered so far.

Castro Agents—Other clandestine uses of the ransom funds are being investigated by the U.S. Immigration Service and the FBI, including the possible return of some of the money to the U.S.

This possibility was suggested in information French officials have turned over to U.S. authorities. French Intelligence warned that nearly 100 Castro agents, including some carrying sizeable amounts of dollars, were among the several thousand refugees recently transported here on the SS Shirley Lykes.

According to the French, Castro planted these Red agents among the refugees to infiltrate anti-Castro groups in the U.S. Their special mission is to learn the names and whereabouts of members of the underground in Cuba.

Getting Tough—The Navy has an amazing plan that would make trading with Communist-ruled Cuba very costly. The proposal, known as the "silent quarantine," calls for spreading a newly developed chemical in Cuban harbors and ports to harass shipping. As most of it consists of Soviet bloc vessels, they would be the hardest hit.

The chemical, when sucked into the boilers and ballast tanks of ships, causes extensive corrosion and leakage in a matter of hours.

The "silent quarantine" plan is one of the more than 25 submitted to the newly organized Cuban Crisis Committee recently set up by the President. Its purpose is to develop ways and means to "lessen the Communist military threat in Cuba."

The committee, with members from the State, Defense and Justice Departments and the Central Intelligence Agency, is headed by Sterling Cottrell.

In formulating its proposals, the committee is operating under sharp limitations. The White House has laid down "guide lines" which bar (1) military invasion, (2) use of internal subversions and (3) use of U.S. arms to incite revolt within Cuba.

Watching Cuba—Eight "free-world" ships were in Havana during the period February 10-14. That is the report of crew members of the ransom-bearing American freighter, S.S. Santo Cerro. Crew members told intelligence authorities they saw three British vessels, three Greek, one Norwegian and one Yugoslavian. In addition, ten Russian, and six East German ships were spotted. The number of "free-world" ships is significant in view of the fact that the State Department holds stringent restrictions are not necessary because of the "voluntary cut-back" in such shipping to Cuba.

Soviet technicians are constructing three rather than one "fishing port" in Cuba, according to the latest U-2 surveillance photos. . . . CIA Director John McCone told the White House briefing of Congressional leaders that two more coastal defense missile sites have been set up by Soviet technicians. This brings the number of these sites to eight, on which the Russians have installed more than 150 of their SS-N-1 missiles.

Castro Spending Prisoner Ransom For Subversion

Dr. Johnson says:

Plain Facts About Smoking

By Harry J. Johnson, M.D.

The same man who can benefit from the relaxing effects of an occasional alcoholic drink may very well benefit from a moderate amount of smoking if he truly derives pleasure from it.

This statement may be surprising, coming as it does from a physician who does not smoke and never has. My thinking about tobacco is not based so much on scientific or medical facts as it is on a simple philosophy of life and health.

Everything we do in life involves a certain amount of risk. Usually the risks we assume do not intrude upon our consciousness of living. We do not think of them as risks.

What is the gain in smoking? The answer must be pleasure. The smoker enjoys it because it enables him to relax. But its relaxing qualities are more psychic and not, as in the case of alcohol, due to a sedative effect. But let's face a fact: The two pleasures are not comparable. There is virtually little or no risk associated with moderate and intelligent drinking. But there is a definite amount of risk associated with any smoking.

Apart from the psychic release of stress, perhaps one of the reasons smoking gives us pleasure is the fact that smoking does give you a physiological lift.

Unlike an alcoholic drink, which helps you relax because it is a depressant, smoking causes stimulation. That is why nervous and jittery people should avoid smoking unless they don't care about their sense of well-being.

The impact of the famous Hammond-Horn reports focused a powerful spotlight on the relationship between smoking and lung cancer. Since that first study, a number of other reports have tended to confirm the Hammond-Horn findings.

The Lung Cancer "Scare" Without unnecessarily burdening ourselves with the technical aspects and complexities of the data, it is sufficient to state that the Hammond-Horn studies indicated that an impressive majority of lung cancer victims were heavy smokers and that lung cancer among non-smokers was relatively rare.

Reports of the Hammond-Horn type have come under critical fire from medical experts, not all associated with the tobacco industry. One serious challenge came from Dr. Joseph Berkson, head of the Division of Biometry and Medical Statistics of the Mayo Clinic.

Referring to the fact that the Hammond-Horn report also showed a statistical relationship between smoking and other forms of cancer, as well as various heart and circulatory diseases, Dr. Berkson said, "For myself, I find it quite incredible that smoking should cause all these diseases. . . . when an investigation set up to test the theory. . . that smoking causes lung cancer turns out to indicate that smoking causes or provokes a whole gamut of diseases, inevitably it raises the suspicion that something is re-miss."

Still, until the cause of lung cancer is uncovered, we must show a healthy respect for the preponderance of statistical evidence that smoking is a cause of lung cancer.

Dear Abby

A Warning To All!

DEAR ABBY: Why do people hang on to letters and pictures of a dead romance? I had a friend who was recently killed in an accident. When her employer came to her wake he brought a box of her personal things that had been locked in her file at work. He gave them to her husband. When the husband opened the box, he found letters and pictures from a fellow he had suspected his wife was in love with during the early years of their marriage. I knew about this affair and knew it had been over for years. The husband didn't know this. He went to pieces and did not attend her funeral. He was located months later, a broken man, in Skid Row. Even in death it's the innocent ones who are hurt the most. Write something about this in your column, Abby. It could spare others that kind of misery.

A FRIEND

DEAR HEARTSICK: You were NOT wrong to have helped your mother and I think your wife is headsick.

What's on your mind? For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to ABBY, BOX 3365, BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF., for Abby's new booklet, "HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS."

DEAR FRIEND: You expressed it very well. Let this be a warning to all who have such souvenirs locked in files, vaults and drawers. Dig them out — for the sake of the living who love you — and give them a private burial.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when a girl writes your initials all over her note books, school books and even on her arms in red and black ink? I am the boy and I don't like it one bit. She never was my girl and never will be. The whole school thinks I am her boyfriend. Please print this so the kids at school will get it straight. S.O.S.

DEAR ABBY: The girl is childish and there is nothing you can do about it. If you make a fuss, she'll have attracted your attention, which is what she is trying to do. Ignore her and she'll go away.

DEAR ABBY: My father died a few months ago leaving my mother alone. In order to supplement her income she decided to rent her downstairs. She asked me to help fix it up, so I agreed. My wife screamed

Noyes Father Of Dream Road

(Ed. Note: This is the fifth of a series of articles on the Keystone Shortway, giving its history from its inception up to its present state of construction. We are certain that readers in the Monroe County area will find the series interesting. They were written for the Keystone Shortway Association by Jack Feeley, Danville News Editor.)

WILLIAMSPORT, PA. — Mrs. Charles E. Noyes, wife of the executive director of the Keystone Shortway Association, is married to a bigamist.

She accepts the fact with womanly grace and patience, telling anyone who asks:

"It is too late, and he is too old to change now. This has been going on for more than 25 years. In sure I can wait a few more."

Charles "Chick" Noyes' second love is a four-lane ribbon of concrete which some day will carry millions of people annually from one end of Pennsylvania to the other. With these people, Noyes is certain, will come the economic rejuvenation to northern Pennsylvania.

Noyes has been "romancing" the Keystone Shortway — a major link in the New York to San Francisco Interstate Route 80 — since 1939 when the road was first conceived as "The Short Route to New York's World's Fair."

Regarded Discoverer

Noyes, in fact, is regarded as the discoverer of the Shortway path which the New York Times once described as "straight as a pair of bowling alleys from Sharon on the western border to Stroudsburg."

"It was when I was manager of the Community Trade Association of Williamsport, now called the Greater Williamsport Chamber of Commerce."

"We were trying to figure a way which this area might entice some of the thousands of motorists who would be going to the 1939-40 World's Fair in New York. I stumbled on a route across the center of Pennsylvania, from Cleveland to New York which cut 75 miles off travel. It passed through Williamsport."

Basically Same

Today's path of the Keystone Shortway is basically the same as the one sketched by Noyes.

The hub of the Keystone Shortway Association is in a small office in the Williamsport Elks Club.

And in the middle of the hub is the easy-going but energetic Noyes, writing letters, preparing newsletters and speeches, rounding up Association members for meetings, making telephone calls, button-holing industrial representatives, prodding, encouraging, cajoling, while all the time selling, selling, selling, the highway he has come to love.

Noyes has a tough job. There is more to building a modern highway than pouring concrete.

The Executive Director, many times joined by Z. H. Confair, Association president, has traveled thousands of miles, back and forth across the Commonwealth and through other states, generating and maintaining interest in the Shortway and helping to establish local Shortway groups.

He and Confair have given 300 talks before organizations and at hearings. No one knows how many "talks" were given to public officials and citizens Noyes managed to get into a corner.

The Shortway Association, supported by contributions from industries, individuals and organizations, has a membership covering 308 miles, many of these in isolated areas.

Frequent Williamsport sessions, therefore, are impossible, so it is generally up to Noyes to see that members and the public are informed on latest developments.

Telephone, Mail

"We make great use of the telephone and the mails. Once a month the office sends out a newsletter detailing progress and problems, and a round-up of newspaper editorials and comments. Last year, the Association gained extra revenue, while still promoting the Shortway, through the sale of distinctive placemats. We have sold close to 550,000 of these."

Another adjunct of the KSA, with which Noyes keeps in close touch, is the Shortway Press and Radio Association — made up of news and radio media from the Shortway belt, and presently headed by Ted Fenstermaier, editor of the Berwick Enterprise.

"This group has proved invaluable," says Noyes.

"It stays on top of the story, constantly telling what the Shortway can do for north central and, for that matter, all of Pennsylvania, while, at the same time, hammering away at the illogical arguments of some of the detractors."

How well Noyes has coordinated Association efforts can be found in some of the statements made by public officials.

Governor William W. Scranton termed the Keystone Shortway the results of the "best public relations job I have ever seen."

When former Governor David L. Lawrence dedicated the first completed section of the Shortway at Stroudsburg, October 23, 1961, he said:

"The directors of this group have been invaluable allies in the Administration's fight to provide a good highway program in history, a program soundly financed so that we will not have to pay for it through deficits."

Most Fortunate

At the same dedication, Deputy Secretary of Highways, Fred S. Poorman, commented:

"In our Highway Department, we have been most fortunate that there has been such unanimous support and opinion for the Shortway location across the State. Officials and others identified with the Keystone Shortway are to be commended for preventing division of any kind that would halt the Shortway's progress."

The unanimity on the Shortway, the absolute lack of discord from any of the areas through which it will pass, can most be traced to the highly effective educational campaign generating from the Association's headquarters in Williamsport.

And the seemingly tireless director of that program is Charles "Chick" Noyes — confirmed bigamist.

The House Of The Week

Y-Shape Offers Individuality

By Jules Loh

AN exterior of eight faces, each more attractive than the next, not only gives this house the individuality every home owner seeks but makes it a practical investment for a host of common-sense reasons.

It's a one-story home with three bedrooms, two and one-half baths and all the essential features required for modern living—family room, a large kitchen with breakfast bar, living room with a grand fireplace, roomy dining room and an abundance of large closets and storage space.

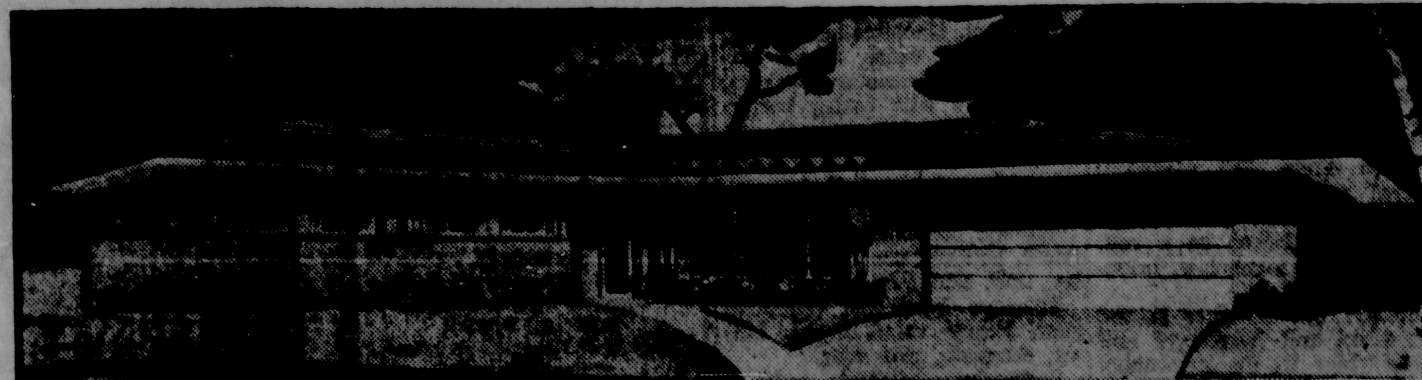

But it also has a variety of features you wouldn't expect in a house of only 1,561 square feet of basic living area, features resulting directly from its unusual and distinctive design.

The layout is roughly in the shape of a Y, with the base at the living room projection, the bedroom wing representing one arm and the housekeeping wing the other.

Its creative designer is architect Samuel Paul. It is design J-61 in the House of the Week series.

Each of its eight sides was designed as a front elevation, Paul said, so that the house can be positioned on a lot of any way you choose. Even a lot as narrow as 60 feet can accommodate this house. But mainly it was designed so the builder can take advantage of the angle of the street, any big trees that might be on the lot, the slope of the terrain, the direction of the sun and so forth.

The exterior presents a sleek, long and handsome silhouette on all sides. Openings in the front of the hip roof and a built-in rear terrace add an interesting play of shade and shadow to the well balanced facade of brick veneer and vertical siding.

Outdoor facilities, important adjuncts to any up-to-date house, include three continuous terraces off the kitchen, dining and living rooms. Sliding doors from the dining room open onto a trellised dining terrace.

Additional Details

Architect Paul suggests you get a detailed plot of your lot drawn to the same scale as it appears in the J-61 study plan. Then try positioning a cut-out of the house on the lot in various ways until you come up with the combination you like. He has included several alternate schemes for lot size and orientation on the study plan to give you a few professional ideas.

No matter how you place it, it will look attractive from the street—a feature which should be welcome to every home buyer who has struggled with the restrictions on design imposed by lot size and shape.

Another alternate feature of this house is the size of the garage. You can have either single or double size without affecting architectural balance.

A dramatic and spacious entrance foyer takes advantage of the point where the house changes direction. Beyond it, a dining room which adjoins the living room at a 45-degree angle does the same thing, a particularly dramatic design because both rooms share one sweeping wall.

The brick fireplace in the living room is flanked by windows at the gable end; and an outdoor barbecue on the terrace takes advantage of the same chimney. A soundproof wall divides the living room and bedroom wing.

The bedroom wing is a nicely planned division featuring a total of 33 linear feet of closet space, a large main bath with a recessed tub and a dual basin vanity more than six feet long, plus a full bath adjoining the master bedroom and equipped with a stall shower and seat.

Though the house has a full basement, Architect Paul has placed the laundry on the main floor adjoining the kitchen, the preference of most housewives. A lavatory is located in the same general area.

One of the especially nice features of this house is the arrangement of family room and kitchen. A counter divides the two, which can be used for snacks. As a matter of fact, seven people can sit comfortably at the counter and breakfast bar which extends into the kitchen.

J-61 STATISTICS

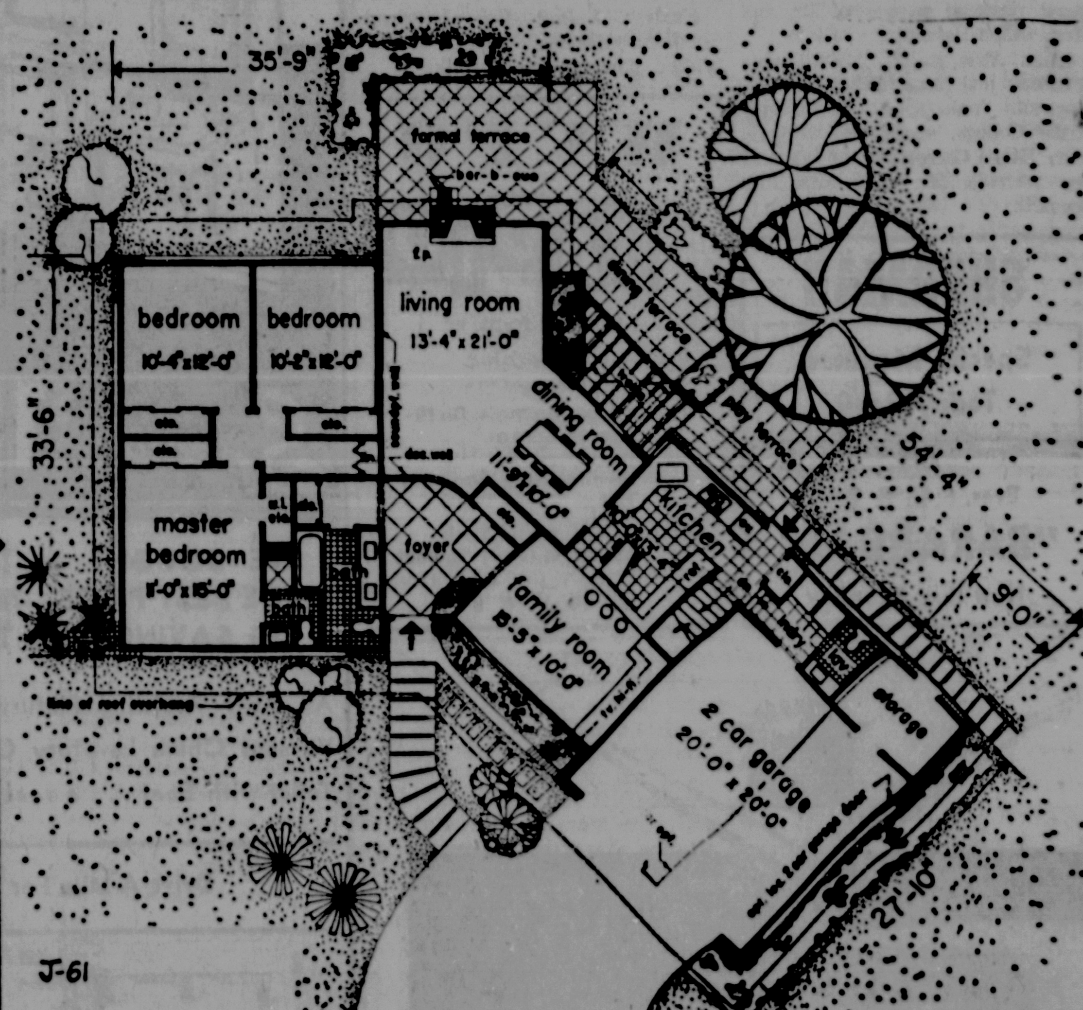

A one-story house of modified Y-shape containing seven rooms in a basic area of 1,561 square feet. Laundry and lavatory contains 76 square feet; cellar contains 1,573 square feet; two-car garage would add 474 square feet; one car garage would add 231 square feet.

Living room and bedroom wing, at widest point, total 35 feet 9 inches wide by 33 feet 8 inches deep. Housekeeping wing, at 45-degree angle, is 54 feet 4 inches wide by 37 feet 10 inches deep in two-car garage design, one-car design reduces width 9 feet.

tion the garage faces the street, with the front entrance angled to the left. House contains three bedrooms and two and one-half baths.

ATTRACTIVE FROM ANY ANGLE: Directly opposite the foyer, the living and dining rooms present an equally pleasing exterior view. The projecting living room, with its fireplace also providing an outdoor barbecue, forms the stem of the rough Y-shape of the house. The bedroom wing extends to the right; the housekeeping wing to the left.

FLOOR PLAN: Any lot 60 feet wide and up will accommodate this house. The total basic living area is 1,561 square feet with the laundry and lavatory occupying another 66 square feet. The garage can be either one or two-car size without upsetting the architectural balance. There are 33 linear feet of closets in bedroom wing.

WELL WATER COST IS LOW

THE cost of getting a supply of ground water by means of a well is almost always lower than the cost for any other kind of a water supply, says Water Systems Council. A private-owned well water system will free the owner completely from worries over municipal water shortages, drying up of ponds and streams, and pollution of surface water supplies.

STOPS BLEEDING

WHILE shellac is seldom recommended these days for finishing furniture because of its sensitivity to alcohol and water, it still has a valuable function in some types of furniture refinishing. If you are planning to use a light enamel over a previously stained and varnished surface—and this goes for woodwork as well as furniture—a single coat of white shellac will prevent the stain from bleeding through the enamel and turning it pink.

BASEBOARD HEAT IS UNIFORM

TESTS of radiant baseboards in research work at the University of Illinois have disclosed that the floor-to-ceiling temperature differences are the smallest ever achieved by the University in tests of any type of heating unit, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Even in sub-zero weather, the floor to ceiling temperature differential was found to be less than 3 degrees.

Oil Furnace Offers Key To Comfort In Your Home

COMFORT is the key to modern living. And in this day and age, the very least to expect in a comfortable house is automatic heat with efficient air filtering and circulation.

To provide such a "comfort system" for the millions of families which prefer oil heat, new oil-fired furnaces have been introduced by a furnace company.

Quieter and more compact than previous models, these furnaces are designed for homes with 800 to 2,500 square feet of living area. They are less than five feet high and fit easily into closets or utility rooms.

Despite their compactness, they are designed for use in complete comfort systems. It's a simple matter to add central air conditioning and electronic air filtering, so that the same ductwork will distribute warm, filtered air in winter and cool, filtered air in summer.

To make this possible, three types of blower arrangement for the first time in the new models. The units are available with single speed, direct drive blowers for heating only; multispeed direct drive blowers for combination heating and cooling; and with the conventional adjustable belt drive.

The multi-speed arrangement lets the housewife change the system from heating to cooling with the flick of a switch at the thermostat.

Another new feature is a control device which operates on the light from the burner flame. If the flame goes out, the oil burner stops immediately and no oil is pumped into the chamber.

HYDRONICS IS QUALITY HEATING

HYDRONICS is the science of heating and cooling with liquids. Hydronic heating is a term for modern forced circulation hot water heating, which is the most advanced type of quality system for the home, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

How To Succeed At Home As Do-It-Yourself Decorator

MOST homeowners can develop sufficient good taste in color styling and attaining balance within rooms to be reasonably successful as do-it-yourself decorators. But too often the efforts of these decor-conscious amateur designers are foiled because they lack certain basic knowledge of decorating concepts and the use of modern-day materials.

To help them better understand the decorator's language and tools, the American Home Improvement Institute, national clearing house for design and building information, has compiled this dictionary of 13 key terms every homeowner should know to achieve success in interior decorating:

Benquette: bench built-in along a wall; usually for sitting while dining.

Chippendale: type of furniture named for famous 18th century English designer; with graceful curved lines and pierced-shell-work ornamentation.

Clerestory: in modern homes, a ribbon of windows high along a wall.

Correlated Group: describes furniture pieces not matching exactly, as in a "suite," but instead related through decorative themes repeated only on some pieces; for use in various rooms simultaneously to draw together overall interior motif of home.

Dim to Bright: device for dialing range of lighting intensity from dim to bright, rather than just on-and-off switch.

Eclectic: currently popular decorating technique of mixing furnishings from past and present periods and from various parts of the globe.

Hepplewhite: type of furniture named for 18th century London cabinetmaker who popularized satinwood and delicate painted finishes.

Kakemono: oriental painting or print on unframed fabric usually with roller along bottom to keep it flat while hanging.

Module: standard measurement in furniture design, previously used only in architecture, which permits matching of same size pieces to achieve a built-in appearance.

More Decorative

Occasional Furniture: tables and chairs in a motif different from the main furnishings in a setting, usually more decorative.

Panache: not solid paneling as name implies, but beautiful and inexpensive type of sculptured filigree openwork; popular as grille-work in room dividers, screens, built-ins, etc.

Just Between Us—

As the list of the ill and wounded rises, it's cheering to hear of nice things happening to people like Arlie and Olive Williams and Christie and Peg Shull taking off this weekend for the West Indies.

Just so long as they stay out of shrimp boats. Actually Peg is flying with one broken wing, so it's good Olive will be along to hook and button things. And they're planning a stopover in Venezuela which might turn out to be more exciting even than shrimp boats.

Come to think of it, that's an awfully short list of nice things on a cold, cold night. Of course we could count John and Kathryn Wellington baby-sitting their grandson while his parents have a New York weekend. The baby is still new enough to make baby-sitting a novelty.

Then Maggie Price's parents are doing some baby sitting down in South Carolina while she and Ray do a duo further south. And Walter and Margie Leonard are already basking under a Southern sun.

Winter-weary and storm-battered a lot of us who must stay at home are asking "Why does anybody want to live around here, anyway?", and then somewhat sheepishly answer our own question, "because we love it".

And there are compensations. Afternoon bridge is having its biggest comeback in years. Super clubs and duplicate groups are drafting couples to fill the ranks of the fallen. We've got musicals and meetings and only a week to go until March.

Happy birthday, George Washington!

I was thinking of Washington at Valley Forge the other night when I ransacked the wiper-rag bin in the press room for rags to fill in the spaces around my boots before starting out in the snow. But a little ashamed, too.

Here we are moaning and groaning, coughing and blowing, wheezing and sneezing, and we're warm—standing over the hot air register, anyway—with plenty of food and plenty of company, and a weekend coming up to get better in.

And I can always get cheered by reading the Morey School Times, about how Miss Wolten's class made butter in quart jars and Mrs. Lim's room painted mood paintings while listening to a recording of "Grand Canyon Suite".

Although even the Morey School Times has its moments of foreboding like the reminder, "Let's help our parents figure out a survival routine". But the story that really fascinated me read, in its entirety:

"Randy, in Mrs. Gearhart's room was somehow sort of choked under the ramp outside. It happened very suddenly and he is all right". Somehow I feel that Randy and I probably have many things in common.

Dutch Supper Centers Around Corn Chowder

The Amish and the Mennonites have long been famous for their fine tables. . . "groaning boards", as the saying goes. Menus are replete with sweets and soups and a vast array of full-bodied dishes, the rewards of hours at the range.

Many of these great and delicious dishes can have their beginnings quite simply with modern day convenience foods. Take chowders for example. . . a rich, thick corn chowder, to be specific. Hours boiling in the kitchen have been reduced to minutes with the new canned dry soup mixes.

Treat your family and friends to a Dutch-style supper. Create a mouth-watering Lancaster County Chowder by reaching first for the canned mushroom dry soup mix. Into this goes diced cooked chicken, cooked corn, parsley, and a dash of thyme. Serve it with a pile of biscuits (made with prepared biscuit mix) and a bowl of sweet-sour cabbage.

Maybe Mink Eyelashes Will Make Up For No Mink Coat

New York (AP) — A shipment of mink and ermine eyelashes failed to arrive in time for Janus Mamm's eye fashion show Wednesday. The blonde glamour girl batted her own pretty peepers twice as hard to make up for things.

They were fringed with fur seal.

Her attractive helpers also wigged their ways through the congested salon, showed their faces close to each guest, widened their eyes, then fluttered the lids.

"I don't even know I have them on," they assured the women in attendance. "Don't they look natural?"

To demonstrate the method of application, a brunette hovered over a flame-haired television personality. Relaxed in the lady's lap was a gray French poodle with sweeping false black eyelashes made of human hair.

"Pur lashes are thicker, more lustrous," said Miss Mann, who wished she had the mink and sable ones to show. "Really, they look the same on as these fur seal ones I have on. The only basic difference is the color."

Miss Mann fronts her own brown orbs with brown seal lashes.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

This is the birthday of George Washington, and Wyckoff's is celebrating with a store-wide sale that would delight the thrifty soul of our First President. We do hope that sometime today you will visit our Wyckoff store. Come tomorrow too, for there will still be some exciting markdowns!

While you are in the store, perhaps you would like to spend 60c for a "Washington's Birthday Gift" to yourself and your family. Frankly, I think every family should have one, if for no other reason than that this book, "The White House, Today and Yesterday" is a wondrously readable, enchantingly illustrated record of something that belongs to you, to me, and to our children. It is a paper-covered book of fine quality, with countless photographs and drawings, both in black-and-white and color, showing what has been happening to this magnificent structure throughout its history. I found it an excellent source of information when preparing a dramatization of White House history for presentation at this past Monday's D.A.R. meeting.

Tragically, George Washington never occupied the President's Palace, the site of which he had selected, and the architectural design and building of which he followed with the utmost concern. The sandstone structure (white, to distinguish it from the usual red brick homes of the day) was eight years in the building, being far from complete when the second President, John Adams, and his wife Abigail, took residence. But it was Abigail, impressed with its superb proportions, who saw the possibilities in this historic structure, calling it "a house for the ages."

In reading about the White House, I have wondered about the occasions when Congress seemed indifferent to its completion and furnishing. The East Room seems to have presented the biggest problem. It has been used for hanging the family wash . . . as a recreation room for Union soldiers on leave . . . with the result that the furniture became so vermin infested it had to be thrown away) . . . It has been used by various White House children as a recreation room wherein they skidded across the parquet floors on kitchen chairs drawn by goats, roller skated, foot raced, or danced. Its lines were once desecrated by the installation of Greek-style columns and fake beams. It was made into a veritable jungle by one First Lady who decorated it with 5000 plants and a garland of smilax one mile long. It has been draped in black for three Presidents who died in office—"Granny" Harrison, Abraham Lincoln, and F.D.R., and has been the scene of several weddings: the first, that of Marie Monroe; the second, that of Nellie, niece of Ulysses Grant, and the most elaborate of all that of "Princess Alice" Roosevelt (Teddy's daughter) to Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth.

It has a fascinating history, this "house for the ages," and I cannot imagine any American who would not thrill with pride at seeing the photographs in "The White House—Today and Yesterday." I prize my copy as a part of deed to my part-ownership in a legacy I share with millions of other men, women and children, and all the generations of the future.

Dick Tiger Says Fullmer Was Still Strong At End

By BOB MYERS

Associated Press Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Middleweight champion Dick Tiger of Nigeria said Thursday that it was not evident to him if the then champion, Gene Fullmer, was overtrained and ran out of gas in their fight at San Francisco last October.

One of the mysteries of that brawl, to those who had seen Fullmer fight before, was the fact that he seemed to lose his stamina from about the fourth round on. Tiger, admittedly a strong man, seemed to own Fullmer in the clinches and the in-fighting.

"No," said Tiger in answer to a question. "He seemed just as strong to me at the last of the fight as he did in the first round. He was still punching right along with me."

Developments after the fight gave evidence that Gene—and not Tiger, as had been rumored at the time—was the one who had serious trouble making the 160-pound limit.

Fullmer's manager, Marv Jensen, later confirmed that Fullmer was in the steam baths at the San Francisco Elks' Club for several days before the fight.

Fullmer's training program, and training is almost a religion with the Mormon elder from Utah, Jensen also said Fullmer was stricken suddenly with intestinal flu the day of the fight and tried to keep the ailment a secret even from his manager.

Never one to offer an excuse, Fullmer merely said: "That was one of the worst nights in the ring I ever had. I know I can do better. At least I'll find out in this fight—either Tiger or myself is the better fighter."

Tiger and Fullmer make no secret of their mutual respect.

"Yes, Fullmer was the toughest man I ever fought, and I think he will be even tougher this time," Tiger said.

S-burg Grapplers Top E-burg, 34-14

STROUD UNION'S Mountaineer matmen last night piled up a 22-0 lead after the first six bouts in trimming East Stroudsburg in the E-burg gym, 34-14, before a crowd of about 650.

The meet was the last of the regular season for both teams. For Stroud Union, which scored its second win of the campaign over the Cavalier grapplers, the victory was their seventh against four losses. East Stroudsburg, meanwhile, went down to its seventh loss against five triumphs.

The Mounties of Coach Dick Merring got off to a fast start as Frank Coco, Bob Quigley and Dutch Grimm scored decisions over their opponents, before Mike Folk and George Van Buskirk pinned their foes to provide a 19-0 lead for the visitors.

Britton Detrick then scored a 6-0 decision over Eastburg's Larry Gordon to build the advantage to 22-0.

The Cavaliers' Randy Heller finally got East Stroudsburg in the scoring column with a 4-2 decision over Bill Miller. Eastburg's Charley Smith followed with a pin over John Krause with a double arm bar, putting the score at 22-8.

But Stroud Union's Don Heller and Floyd Lambert added a pair of decisions to put the match on ice as the score mounted to 28-8 with only two bouts left.

Jon Raymond of Stroud scored the fastest pin of the evening in the next match when he topped Frank Smiley with a body press in 46 seconds. In the unlimited division, But Stann took but 54 seconds to dispose of Stroudsburg's Larry Pope with a body press. Stann thus completed the regular season by registering pins over each of his opponents.

85—Frank Coco (SU) decision Ray Gallagher, 3-2.

106—Bob Quigley (SU) decision Bruce MacIntire, 10-9.

115—Dutch Grimm (SU) decision Don Dandit, 7-3.

123—Mike Folk (SU) pinned Jack B. Hineline, body press, 3:31.

130—George Van Buskirk (SU) pinned Jack T. Hineline, body press, 3:41.

136—Britton Detrick (SU) decision Larry Gordon, 6-0.

141—Randy Heller (E) decision Bill Miller, 4-2.

148—Charley Smith (E) pinned John Krause, double arm bar, 2:42.

157—Don Heller (SU) decision Harold Bounshell, 3-2.

168—Floyd Lambert (SU), decision Steve Quick, 7-6 (time advantage).

183—Jon Raymond (SU) pinned Frank Smiley, body press, 46 sec.

187—Bud Stann (E) pinned Larry Pope, 54 sec.

Catty At S-burg Is Hoop Feature

UNBEATEN Catawauqua is expected to jump over its last hurdle in Lehigh Valley league competition when they tackle Stroud Union's Mountaineers in the S-burg gym tonight in the feature attraction of a two-game slate. The contest is the last of the season for both teams.

In the other action, winless Pleasant Valley is at Northwestern in the other action.

The Rough Riders of Catty, who have already clinched their fourth straight loop championship, have been spared all season by their magnificent 6-4 junior, Larry Miller.

Earlier in the season, Miller won the most valuable player trophy in the Johnston Invitational tournament, scoring 28 points in a 57-49 victory over Johnston and 12 in a 70-49 loss to Class B champion Darby.

Look Sharp

Stroud Union, meanwhile, has looked sharp in its last two outings against East Stroudsburg and Lehigh Valley, the Mountaineers avenged previous defeats at the hands of both. Before the Eastburg meeting last Saturday, the Mountaineers had dropped nine straight.

The combination of Ed Nevil, Dave Pierson, Glen Bishop, Henry Ray and Skippy Kintz has finally seemed to jell for the S-burg quint in their last two wins.

Pleasant Valley, still looking for its first victory, is on the road for a tussle with Northwestern in the other action.

'62 All-Staters Star In College

By DAVE LEEBEE

HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvania basketball fans apparently have been kept on the former Uniontown star since the Minnesota freshmen team doesn't play a regular slate of games.

Graul is the biggest pointmaker of the quintet with an impressive 23.6 average in 19 games. His slate includes 173 field goals and 103 free throws for 449 points.

Bright Prospect

"Dick is one of the brightest prospects ever to play on the freshman team at Seattle," comments Athletic Director Ed O'Brien. "He has an excellent chance to move right into the varsity lineup as a sophomore."

Other Stars

Similar performances are reported for Jim Williams, the 6-9 center from Norristown, now with Temple; Jack Martin of Farrell, now with Duke; Jeff Neumann of Altoona, now with Penn; and Dick Graul of Reading, first year star at the University of Seattle.

Williams, Martin, Neuman and Graul together are averaging a lustrous 80.4 points a game, not counting Yates. No statistics have been kept on the former Uniontown star since the Minnesota freshmen team doesn't play a regular slate of games.
